Startling and Terrible

To the ear of affection is the sound of a dry, metallic cough, that seems as if a rattle were sprung in the chest of the beloved one. Hasten to looser it with HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR, the new medicinal agent, which is admitted to be the best remedy for pulmonary complaints at present known. The cures it is accomplishing astonish the faculty and delight the people. All druggists keep it. Price 50c. and 81. Great Saving to buy a large

Ot All Sad Words.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these-I'm licked .-

If the People's party hadn't been quite so numerous; if we had put up a more suitable man than Van Zile; if we had only possessed a few thousand more votes; if the day had been a little more cloudy; if it had rained a little; if we had only spent more money; if our judgment had not failed us; if we had indulged in less cratory and a little more sense, we might—we might— and then again we might—not.— Disappointed Liberal Voters.

EARTHQUAKES!

Things.

For some time past earthquake sensations have been felt at Denver and at points along the line of the Union Pacific Railroad. A little Union Pacific Railroad. A little over four weeks ago some persons declared that they had felt a slight shock of earthquake at night, but the matter passed over without any reference. Last night, however, the shock was unmistakable. Mr. S. P. Teasdel states that at 6 o'clock precisely, not only he, but quite a number in his store had experienced it. He states that it lasted for probably twenty seconds, and moved in a northerly direction. Parties in the co-operative store noticed it at the same time, and in one house the the same time, and in one house the 'amps were almost upset and the doors swung on their hinges. The sensation was slight at first, but it grew quite strong in a few seconds and rocked houses and caused some people to believe the bitter end had arrived. However, no harm was done save what a few bad scares might temporarily induce.

Funeral Sermons.

The thought has many times The Country Full of These Queer passed through my mind, on remen are gifted with a sense of "fitness of things;" in other words, how few men are capable of saying the proper words at a funeral—words that shall bear healing on their wings to the bereaved, that shall sink deep into those bleeding and wounded hearts. It is for the satisfaction and comfort of these, that a funeral service is intended. The dead need it not, and in my opinion, care very little after their soul has escaped from its earthly tenement, what is said of them. It is the living ones, who are left, that turning from a funeral, how few

is the living ones, who are left, that is the living ones, who are left, that meed these words of commendation spoken in behalf of their beloved dead. It is to them these remarks should be made, and far better say nothing than wound by thoughtless words at such a time. I have often le listened to good sermons on such oocasions, sermons sultable for Sunday service, with the object in view entirely lost sight of. Only men of generous impulse, and a broad love for humanity, should ever speak at a funeral. The selfish man who lives for his son, can never mourn the loss of another man's child.
The first thought he expresses, is to vindicate himself, and self being the largest thing he sees, it usually occupies the time allotted to him, and intended to be devoted to the occasion which called him to this place of mourning, viz.: to speak of the virtues of the decoased to those who are present.
Somstimes this is called for, as many pass from earth unknown—as they really are—and this vindication of their character and lives seems only a matter of justice and really a duty —coming from those who knew them, as others did not—words spoken from the heart—invariably reach the hearts of others, and a generous sympathy is a well-spring from which words of comfort flow spontaneously.
